

There's No Place Like Hotel

Luxury-property guests are increasingly calling their rooms home

In California's Wine Country, residential units are part of nearly every new hotel—offering rare opportunities to own in the coveted region. The luxurious Calistoga Ranch and the Carneros Inn each have beautiful home components that reflect the hotel aesthetic and offer owners exclusivity and wine-country refinement.

While not necessarily inexpensive (in the $2 million-plus range) the 24 homes at Carneros Inn feature amenities that a homeowner would pay exorbitant sums to feature in a typical independent home. Designed in contemporary Wine Country style, with stone countertops and cherry-wood floors, the homes provide their owners with turnkey ambiance backed by facilities and service that can make owners feel like one of the many mega-rich wine-makers who populate the area.